

Abstract of the Disclosure

The present invention relates to a method for triggering apoptosis, in which the C1D gene is overexpressed in cells, in particular, in tumor cells. This occurs, for instance, by introducing corresponding expression constructs in the cells or by exogenous stimulation of the expression of the cell's own C1D gene.